Health problem	Impact on work	Adjustments/support
Diabetes, epilepsy, heart conditions	Some A&C staff work shifts (including nights) which may have an impact on some health conditions. This is especially important if you have not worked shifts before.	For most people it takes a little time to get used to shift patterns i.e. change in dietary and sleep patterns. This may be made more difficult by some health conditions. Temporary or permanent adjustments may be required. Please declare all health conditions that may be affected by shift work.
Any other health condition that may impact on your role (please see job description)  New or expectant mothers.	Some health conditions may be exacerbated by working in a health care setting or impact on your ability to perform all of your duties.  Whilst not a health problem, new or expectant mothers have a legal right to a work place risk assessment to ensure that they are not exposed to hazards in the work place that may pose a risk to themselves or their unborn child.	You may discuss any health condition that you think may affect your work, in confidence, with the OH team. Where practicable, adjustments will be made to help you achieve your full potential in the workplace. Specific health conditions are not discussed with your manager or any other third party without your consent.  You should inform your manager in writing that you are pregnant. On receipt of this information, your manager will undertake a risk assessment. If any risks/hazards are identified, adjustments will be made to minimise/remove them. This may or may not include the occupational health department. If you would like confidential advice in regard to work and pregnancy, you may self refer to OH.
Sickness absence records	The Trust will be asking your referee about your sickness absence record over the last 2 years.	If your sickness absence record gives your recruiting manager cause for concern or if your absence hits one of the trigger points in the Trust sickness and absence policy, a member of the OH will contact you. The purpose of the call is to establish if there is an underlying health issue and if the Trust needs to make any reasonable adjustments for you.
